Slipper Room Goes on Tour

A staple in the Lower East Side is temporarily on hold as the Slipper Room remodels itself into a gargantuan Opera-style House. But that doesn't mean their show is over. It's now on tour at underground and prominent places across NYC. Here's a video of their show from last week at Players inside the National Arts Club.

Dinner in West Soho

Soho is known for its expensive restaurants and bars, but walk a little west and you will find a hidden gem - 508 Restaurant and Bar. It's on Greenwich just south of Spring. Here's a short video that shows you why this place is quickly becoming popular with the locals.

Last night at Cellar 58 in the East Village

It may be a wine bar, but this place is fun after work. Maybe it's the wine or the good-looking crowd outside. Check it out on 2nd Avenue and 3rd Street. For weekly drink specials go to their Facebook page - Cellar 58.

The Real Housewives of New York City

Okay, so maybe it's a parody, but these housewives are kinda a ringer for the Real Housewives.

How hot was it in NYC?

Hot enough for Jon Stewart to find humor in it.

The Proposal

We've all heard of fake proposals on the jumbo screens at sporting events, but what happens when a guy proposes to his girlfriend, without even knowing it? That's what happened at Yankee stadium when a few guys pulled a prank on their best friend.

Reading a Psychic

I walked by a psychic today and took a peak through her open window. I think she was expecting me because she looked right back at me and smiled.

Have you ever noticed how most psychics never smile? Watch their tv commercials or look at their ads in Time Out Magazine. They always have a pensive look that seems to carry the weight of the world. I guess it makes sense. If they really do know the future of the world, I'd be a little pensive too. There's a reason why ignorance is bliss.

Taxicab Confessions

Just another reminder. You're not alone in that cab so watch what you say. And if you ever find yourself drunk and someone asks you to sign a release - DON'T DO IT.

I'm a New Yorker

Every New York transplant remembers his or her first experience in the City. It was overwhelming, scary, exhilarating, stimulating and full of hope. Ashley Dupre and Andrea George remember that moment when they first realized they were a New Yorker

How to Get a Guy to Commit

Ask any single woman in NYC, and she'll tell you: Guys in New York just don't want to commit. Is it because they don't want to grow up or they become too self-absorbed with what this city has to offer? Ashley Dupre and Andrea George talk about the secrets to getting a guy down the aisle - something Andrea recently accomplished.

Opinionated New Yorkers. Who is Right?

New Yorkers are full of opinions. Just ask them a simple question like Yankees vs. Mets or Jets vs Giants and you will start an argument in any bar. The funny thing is both sides honestly believe they are right.

They will argue their point with statistics, history and analysis in the hope that you will sooner or later see their side. But sometimes an argument doesn't have an answer, even with a controversial topic as extreme as health care. (OH, I can already feel both sides fuming).

The Making of an Empire

There's nothing that inspires you more than a musician working his way to the top of the art world, purely by motivation, drive, talent and hard work. It happened to Jay Z and now he's produced a documentary on it. The trailer is below, or CLICK HERE to watch the 15-Minute documentary on his musical memories of NYC.
